1 Siyaset Bilimi ve Kamu Yönetimi Political Science and Public Administration	KMY 414	4	The Global Politics of Food	Bahar Spring	This course examines the politics of the global food system, and will focus on the policies, structures, power relations and political debates surrounding the production, distribution, and consumption of food. The impacts of food production and consumption on food security, health, the environment, animal welfare, and the livelihoods of producers, will be critically explored. Key theoretical frameworks and concepts for understanding the dominant paradigms and dynamics of the food system will be discussed and evaluated. Integrated policies and strategies for creating more sustainable and equal food systems, and alternative paradigms and practices of production, distribution, and consumption, will also be critically examined. This subject will primarily draw on theories and methodologies from the sociology and politics of food and agriculture, food policy, and the political economy and political ecology of food.	Dr. Ayşe Kalav Köken	Face to Face
2 Siyaset Bilimi ve Kamu Yönetimi Political Science and Public Administration	KMY 415	4	Gender, Politics and Society	Güz Fall	The course aims to explore the implications of gender and feminist perspectives on politics and the study of politics. One of the main goals of the course is to gain a deeper understanding of the ways in which gender and gender inequality shape institutions, policies, and political processes, as well as the way states affect gender relations, the political construction of gender, and political mobilization based on gender.
